ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A semiconductor integrated circuit includes an internal circuit having first and second external terminals, first and second fuse elements, each having first and second terminals, the first terminals of the first and second fuse elements being respectively connected to the first and second external terminals, and a discharge line connected to the second terminals of the first and second fuse elements and serving as an electrostatic discharge current path.

5

10